

Butler, Jennie C

From: brea91@earthlink.net
Sent: Wednesday, April 07, 1999 7:27 PM
To: FDADockets@test.oc.fda.gov
Subject: irradiated food labeling

Labels denoting irradiated food are conveying information many consumers want. Buying/eating irradiated food should be a CHOICE. There are undoubtedly many consumers who would not recognize the label, or care if they did. This does not logically lead to the conclusion that labeling should be eradicated. There are many consumers who feel strongly about the issue of irradiation -- pro and con. The real issue here is choice. I feel it would be a disservice to the consuming public to take away their freedom of choice.

Murphy Davis
email:brea91@earthlink.net

98N-1038

C496